7.C FORM AND DATE OF MOST RECENT RECORDS OR INVENTORY OF PROPERTY

The Sydney Opera House's collection of information and records about its history (the Dennis Wolanski Library) was closed in 1996 and most of the collection was dispersed. The main recipients were the State Library of New South Wales, the University of New South Wales and the Victorian Arts Centre Performing Arts Museum. A small collection was retained on site by the Sydney Opera House Trust and is known as the Dennis Wolanski Archives. It includes several historic models by Jørn Utzon and a collection of books, articles and artefacts.

'The Utzon Collection' held by the Mitchell Library at the New South Wales State Library is a major collection of Jørn Utzon's office files, plans, working models and sketches generated before 1966.

New South Wales State Records holds the records of New South Wales Public Works which was the government agency responsible for overseeing the erection of the Sydney Opera House. The archive includes the group of 12 drawings by Jørn Utzon that won the 1956 architectural competition for a 'National Opera House', records from the Hornibrook Group and Hall Todd & Littlemore, photographs, minutes of meetings, speeches, press releases, parliamentary papers and news clippings.

The National Library of Australia holds thousands of items relating to the Sydney Opera House including government reports, oral history transcripts, photographs, cartoons and manuscript collections such as the 'Papers of Henry Ingham Ashworth'.

The Powerhouse Museum Sydney holds an important sectional model of the Sydney Opera House commissioned by Utzon, a prototype of the Sydney Opera House tile-lids.

The Utzon Center at Aalborg University, Denmark, is generating a new archive about Utzon with an emphasis on the Sydney Opera House. Many of these records are being donated from private collections, including some records from Utzon and from his friends and acquaintances.
